The sad news has just arrived that Claude Lévi-Strauss, who celebrated his 100th birthday less than a year ago, has passed away. See the coverage in the New York Times, Le Monde, Le Figaro, The Atlantic Wire, and an extensive obituary by Maurice Bloch in The Guardian. I think that one of the comments written in response to the NYT article puts it very well: “There are moments when it hits you that the 20th century has ended.”
